INTRODUCTION

Who were the South Carolinians taking up land i Tennessee, Alabama, and Mississippi, and what route did they travel?" This question is often asked me b people not too familiar with southern history. Recalling the statement that 40 per cent of South Carolina's native-born had moved from the State by 1850-60, I decided to begin a compilation of names o those who left before that time.

In this first volume I am using one of the most popular territories opened to settlers--the Natchez Trace. Why did they go in such numbers? A new land holds a charm to those of adventurous spirits. Some felt their poverty would be lessened, while thousand of substantial citizens realized the chance to give their children the better things of life. Quite a number of Revolutionary soldiers joined the throng. At the beginning of the Revolutionary War, a few South Carolina Loyalists joined the British Colony i the Natchez area.

In covered wagons, on horseback or canoe, the treck was started--following Indian paths, stage coach routes, military and post roads. A great number crossed the Savannah River at Augusta or Ross's Landing. The "Georgia State Road" was used by many; some went through the northwest corner of the State into North Carolina and then into Tennessee.

The Natchez Trace, or Chickasaw Road, was an ol Indian path, the southern portion extending from Nashville, Tennessee, to Natchez, Mississippi, a distance of some five hundred miles. No wild west stor is more blood-curdling than the experiences of many on the road. If one was fortunate enough to escape the tomahawk, he stood in danger of being robbed by fellow American. I have departed somewhat from the original Indian trace in order to include more South Carolinians living on ceded land.

By 1820 the land ceded by the Choctaw Indians was divided into many counties and rapidly settled. Dunbar Rowland, in his History of Mississippi, makes reference to some counties being almost depopulated by the rush to new territory. In 1832 the treaty for the Chickasaw land was finally signed.

Outstanding preachers were on the Trace before 1800, among them being James Hall of Salisbury District, North Carolina, and Lorenzo Dow of Connecticut. Those going from South Carolina before 1850 were Henry Simmons, Zachariah Reeves, Sr., Isaac Muse, S. P. Whitten, Francis C. Spraggins, Lewis R. Holloway, Samuel Thigpen, William Allen, Thomas Nixon, Stephen Herring, Seyan Mayfield, Frederick Weaver, William W. Nash, William Kitchens, Elam Waddell, Amos Lee, Joseph Robinson, G. W. Boggs, James P. Commander, Frederick Harmon, Enos Fletcher, G. W. Burt, G. H. Brown, Wilson Clark, James Smiley, G. P. Claughton, Lemuel E. Wall, A. B. Laurence, James Rolin, William Young, William V. Frierson, Thomas C. Stuart, Lewis Ball, Martin Ball, Elijah Browning, V. W. Brock, James N. Caruthers, G. W. Murray, Jonah Seale, Thomas Gore, James Laughridge, Alexander Rembert, Henry L. Sloan, Robert B. Campbell, Weyman Adoit, Jacob Mathews, S. I. Coldwell, James C. Tarrant, and James Smith.

In 1934 a Congressional Act was passed providing an appropriation to make a survey of the historic trace with a view to constructing a National Highway which today has become a picturesque drive.

Thanks are due my cousin, Prof. Alister Holmes, retired head of the History Department of Clemson College, South Carolina.

I wish to correspond with all whose roots go back to South Carolina, with the object of compiling in book form the second volume of "Migration of South Carolinians" which is now being completed.
